

Credentialing and Contracting Is a Nightmare for Groups and Individual Providers. Having Someone to Help You Make the Process Smooth Is a Must.

AUTHOR: KYLE HAUBRICH

We have worked hard to ensure that our contracting and credentialing process is smooth and easy for providers, groups, and other medical practices. We have worked hard to obtain experienced contacts with all the public and private health insurance companies. I hear all the time from my clients about their horror stories concerning credentialing and contracting companies they have hired in the past. These horror stories include never knowing what the status is of any health insurance contract is; whether their providers or group are credentialed, contracted, and good to go; or even what information the credentialing and contracting company needs to get the process started. They have all told us, when they tell us these horror stories, that the company responds quickly when it comes to getting paid, but very slow to respond when it comes to finding out if any credentialing and contracting has even been started or completed.

With our program, we walk our clients through the process from beginning to end, and make sure that the client knows how each step of the process will go. Getting your providers, groups, or medical practices fully credentialed and contracted can be a scary and very time-consuming undertaking. Making sure you have someone that can help you make the process as smooth as possible is a must. Do not go this alone. You'll be better off with an experienced credentialing and contracting team.
