Jennifer Blood

ATTORNEY IN ST. LOUIS, MO

Jennifer (Jenny) Blood joined the firm in 2024 and is a member of our Health Law Practice group. Jenny offers a trifecta of expertise from a unique perspective: she has experience defending those in the medical profession in various capacities; she is a successful trial attorney and teaches Trial Advocacy at Washington University; and she has personal experience as an entrepreneur. This repertoire serves her clients in that Jenny is prepared for all scenarios. As a trial attorney, she is fully equipped to defend through the entirety of litigation. As a former entrepreneur, she has a unique understanding of business goals and can seek creative remedies that are congruous with and beneficial to her clients' needs. This understanding allows Jenny to create and successfully implement an ideal, customized defense plan specific to each case and client. She finds solutions to complicated problems.

Now as a defense attorney, Jenny has experience as a former plaintiff's attorney that allows her to anticipate and cleverly thwart a plaintiff's strategy. Her close ties to her family in the healthcare industry have inspired her to defend healthcare providers, which she does with zeal and attention to detail.

When she's not defending clients, Jenny often puts her legal skills to work on pro bono matters. She has given her time to Little Patriots United benefiting veterans, and Message n a Meal, a program that feeds the homeless and helps them find jobs and shelter so those who are able can become productive citizens in the city of St. Louis.
